DBIC CREDIT PROGRAM

2016

Upon your mind, open your china’s business

SHU
About DBIC Credit Program

China’s fast growth and its integration into the world economy create opportunities for international business but foreign companies also face the challenge of adjusting their way of doing business in China. To thrive in doing business in China, understanding the changing and complex market environment, the country’s policy making as well as Chinese language and culture is crucial. This program is designed to provide students with a multi-dimensional understanding of China Business.

This well-tailored, multi-disciplinary program focuses on all specific areas relevant to doing business in China. With relevant theories and up-to-date practical applications, the program aims to equip students with systematic knowledge of business practices and the ability to analyze changes in government policies and regulations that affect business operations in China.

The program is offered by the Faculty of Institute of Economics, Institute of Foreign Languages, and College of International Exchange at Shanghai University. It covers the economic, social, legal, cultural, political, management, and financial aspects of China. The curriculum includes Chinese language study for international students and Chinese culture and cross-cultural study for all students.
